The concept of weaving is used to heal part of the Globeville neighborhood that has become strangulated by a network of major interstates, rail lines and industrial practices. Fox Street has the potential to become the central seam that will bind the neighborhood to the greater Denver area once the RTD Gold Line light rail begins operation in 2016. An opportunity to become an inviting place becomes possible by holistically knitting the neighborhood, people, ecology and infrastructure of the site together.
WEAVING PEOPLE + PLACE + ECOLOGY

Fall 2010