The Department of Anthropology at the University of Colorado Denver invites applications for a tenure-track position in Medical Anthropology at the Assistant Professor level beginning fall 2018. Ph.D. required at time of appointment. We seek a medical anthropologist with specialization in health policy, applied clinical anthropology, and/or the critical study of biomedicine. Potential areas of interest include but are not limited to:

- Critical medical anthropology
- Applied health policy studies
- Community-based research approaches
- The critical study of biomedicine (including topics such as clinical trials, pharmaceuticals, race and genomics, anthropology of the clinic, risk and genetic screening, new medical technologies)

Candidates would join a three-field department (medical anthropology, biological anthropology and archaeology) with a vibrant terminal MA program in anthropology with an emphasis on producing scholar-practitioners."

Candidates with a proven track record of high impact publications, an ongoing community-driven field research project, high potential for garnering external funding, and an ability to complement faculty strengths and solidify links to the CU Medical campus are especially encouraged to apply. Teaching responsibilities include undergraduate and graduate courses in the successful candidate's area of expertise. The ability and willingness to teach graduate-level courses in anthropological theory and qualitative methods, and the overlap of their research with topics in biological anthropology will be considered a significant asset.

Applicants must apply online at www.cu.edu/cu-careers and reference Requisition 11589. Applications should include a cover letter describing teaching and research interests, current curriculum vitae, and contact information (including e-mail addresses) for at least three professional references. For any questions about material submission, please contact Connie Turner at 303.315.7328 or connie.turner@ucdenver.edu. Review of applications will begin on November 30, 2017 and continue until the position is filled. University of Colorado Denver requires background investigations for employment. The University of Colorado is committed to diversity and equality in education and employment. As one of four institutions within the University of Colorado system, CU Denver is located in downtown Denver and seeks to meet the needs of a diverse population through its curriculum, research/creative work and community service activities.