One school, three campuses, endless possibilities

About our school
The Colorado School of Public Health is a collaboration of the University of Colorado, Colorado State University, and the University of Northern Colorado, and is uniquely defined by the collective strengths of each. Our faculty, students, alumni, and community partners work together to fulfill a commitment to protect and promote health across the region and the world.

By focusing on the needs of the communities that we serve, the school is focused on the emerging health issues and opportunities of the 21st Century. Across the state and around the world, the strength of our mission is evident in the students that we train, the communities that we serve, and the research and science that we advance.

Areas of Study

:: Animals, People & the Environment
:: Biostatistics
:: Community & Behavioral Health
:: Community Health Education
:: Environmental & Occupational Health
:: Epidemiology
:: Global Health & Health Disparities
:: Global Public Health
:: Health Communication
:: Health Services Research
:: Health Systems, Management & Policy
:: Leadership & Public Health Practice (online)
:: Maternal & Child Health
:: Physical Activity & Healthy Lifestyles
:: Public Health Nutrition
:: American Indian and Alaska Native Health
:: Cancer Prevention and Control
:: Diabetes and Obesity Prevention
:: Global Health
:: Maternal and Child Health
:: Worker Health and Wellness

We invite you to visit our collaboration: publichealth.ucdenver.edu.