The School of Education & Human Development at the University of Colorado Denver is seeking nominations and applications for the position of Tenure Track Assistant Professor in Human Development and Family Relations. The HDFR program is committed to a curriculum rich in family diversity and social justice. The HDFR program is the first of its kind in the United States to offer bilingual (Spanish and English) HDFR course work. The HDFR program also utilizes the Certified Family Life Educator curriculum as provided by the National Council on Family Relations.

Located in the heart of downtown Denver, which has a population that is increasingly diverse (32% Latino and 10% African American as well as Asian and American Indian), the faculty of the School of Education & Human Development (SEHD) have taken a leadership role in preparing professionals to work in diverse schools, agencies and related settings. The SEHD emphasizes collaborative partnerships within diverse community settings, and currently the School of Education & Human Development has over 2000 graduate students and a growing undergraduate student body, 47 full-time faculty, as well as grant faculty and staff who are responsible for about six million dollars annually in grants.

Rank: Tenure Track Assistant Professor
Position Start Date: August 2017

Major Responsibilities:

- Develop and carry out a rigorous research agenda. Engage actively with other faculty in the development and elaboration of the School’s research themes addressing such issues related to family relations, family diversity and social justice.

- Teach undergraduate and graduate courses in the Human Development and Family Relations (HDFR) program.

- Infuse family diversity issues in all courses.

- Promote the expansion of the program's inclusion of and connection with members of Denver's diverse communities.

- Participate in faculty meetings; provide committee service in the HDFR program in the School of Education & Human Development.
- Must be open to using electronic media for instruction, such as Canvas, as courses at CU Denver can be offered as face-to-face, hybrid or online.

Employment Conditions:
This is a full-time academic year tenure-track position. Opportunity for summer teaching is available.

Required Qualifications:
- A doctorate in Human Development and Family Science or closely related Family Studies disciplines, Marriage and Family Therapy or Social Work. ABD candidates will be considered.

- An academic background with an emphasis in family diversity and ecological systems based human development.

- Demonstrated success or potential for strong productivity in research and grant writing focused on family diversity and social justice and other family relation issues.

- Commitment to the professional fields of Human Development and Family Science as evidenced by education, teaching and field experience, and professional affiliations such as the National Council on Family Relations, Family Science Association, American Association of Family and Consumer Sciences, the American Association of Marriage and Family Therapy and other organizations.

- Demonstrated success or potential for graduate and undergraduate level teaching in HDFR.

Preferred Qualifications:
- Demonstrate bilingual (Spanish and English) competencies in working with culturally and linguistically diverse families.

- Demonstrate evidence or potential of working with diverse families as it relates to social justice issues in teaching, research and service.

- Experience working with graduate and undergraduate students in instruction and mentoring activities.

- Eligible or potential to qualify for the Certification in Family Life Education (CFLE).

Salary and Benefits
Salary is commensurate with qualifications. The University of Colorado offers a full benefits package.
