Oncology Nutrition Services

Registered Dietitians providing individualized counseling to patients throughout their cancer care.

What is the Oncology Nutrition Service at the University of Colorado Cancer Center?

Our program is staffed by Registered Dietitians (RD) specializing in oncology nutrition. In collaboration with your treatment team, RDs complete individualized nutrition assessments and develop a personalized nutrition care plan.

Why should I meet with a Registered Dietitian?

A well-balanced nutrition plan can improve tolerance and response to therapy as well as promote recovery from treatment. The oncology dietitian can help patients address the following nutrition-related concerns:

- Changes in appetite
- Chewing and swallowing difficulties
- Constipation
- Dehydration
- Diarrhea
- Fatigue
- Nausea
- Survivorship after treatment
- Taste changes
- Unintentional weight changes
- Vitamin and herbal supplements

How do I get an appointment with an Oncology Dietitian?

Ask your provider to make a referral for you with a Registered Dietitian.
