Student Fee Review Committee is a state-mandated committee that looks at the distribution and usage of student fees at the University of Colorado Denver.

Student fees are presented to the committee via the Request For Proposal document that contains a series of questions that includes current goals, usage of funds, feedback data, and student usage data. Any request for student fee allocated money is first evaluated by this committee before the request becomes official. The allocation decisions from this committee are then sent to the Management Fee Review Team, who implement the fees into your total student fee. Their recommendations are then carried to the University of Colorado Board of Regents, who oversee major institutional changes at all four CU campuses.
