CCTSI was launched in 2008

- Funded by an NIH CTSA grant award
- Substantial financial support from partner universities and hospitals
- Grant renewed in 2013

Our first grant was the largest CU had ever received

Largest federal research grant in Colorado History

Each year CCTSI awards more than $2 million in pilot grants, MicroGrants, and pre- and post-doctoral research awards
Since 2008 the CCTSI has:

Tripled
the number of training and education programs supporting the lifespan of an investigational career

Funded 310
pilot research projects that cover the spectrum of basic science all the way to community-based research

Supported 90
TL1 and KL2 scholars and early career scientists through grants and mentoring programs

Promoted TEAM SCIENCE
and interdisciplinary research through robust training, pilot grant programs, Research Studios and technology cores
The CCTSI accelerates and catalyzes the translation of innovative science into improved health and patient care.

CCTSI community engagement team helps researchers connect with diverse communities.

3,221 active projects in REDCap (Research Electronic Data Capture), which is managed by CCTSI.

CCTSI built Colorado PROFILES in 2009: a powerful search engine and networking tool that gets more than 20,000 pageviews per month.
CCTSI’s robust education, training and career development program helps develop and retain a talented translational research workforce.

For every $1 invested in CCTSI pilot grants there is a return on investment (ROI) of about $9 in follow on funding.

University of Colorado Hospital, Children’s Hospital Colorado, National Jewish Health and CU Boulder conduct clinical trials and research at CCTSI’s four Clinical and Translational Research Centers:

- Uchealth
- Children’s Hospital Colorado
- National Jewish Health
- University of Colorado Boulder
