Development of our project idea

• We all are focused on an academic career
• We all have concerns over advancement and promotion
• We all have research interests focused on different health concerns
• We all are teachers
• Service is a core belief for all of us.
  • It comes at a cost to other endeavors
What is Service?

There is no standardized definition among academic medical centers; and there are multiple terms.

• Institutional Service: Committee membership, program leadership, mentorship

• Academic Service: Grant reviews, study section, editorial board membership

• Community Service: community outreach, community engagement, advocacy, public policy, partnership, disparities
Background: Mission Statement of CUSOM

The mission of the University of Colorado School of Medicine is to provide Colorado, the nation and the world with programs of excellence in:

- Education - through the provision of educational programs to medical students, allied health students, graduate students and housestaff, practicing health professionals and the public at large;
- Research - through the development of new knowledge in the basic and clinical sciences, as well as in health policy and health care education;
- Community Service - through sharing the School's expertise and knowledge to enhance the broader community, including our affiliated institutions, other healthcare professionals, alumni and other colleagues, and citizens of the state.
Case Study: Dr. A.

• Associate Professor, Faculty Clinician, Internationally recognized expert in her field
• Female
• Mexican-American
• Leader in advocacy and community engagement
• Spearheading programmatic changes in her national medical society for diversity, equity and inclusion
• President of the Colorado chapter of a national nonprofit devoted to health disparities, health professional training and education
Dr. A continued:

• Despite these extensive and valuable endeavors she has no university approved deliverables to contribute to her dossier.
• Barrier to promotion to full professor
• Now being actively recruited by multiple high profile medical centers outside the state
• Dr. A is not alone...
Potential concern for diverse faculty

Recognizing Excellence in Community Service: A CU School of Medicine Opportunity

• Key questions –
  • How does CUSOM currently recognize community service?
  • What currently exists on campus to support community service?
  • How do other institutions consider community service and engagement?
  • Should more recognition of community service and engagement be incorporated into the promotion matrix?
  • What should we consider in the future?
Project Objectives

• Understand the promotion process for community service based on available CUSOM-specific and national data.

• Engage key stakeholders to understand resources for meaningful community service by CUSOM faculty.

• Propose strategies to improve recognition of community service at CUSOM.
How does CUSOM currently recognize community service?
Current CUSOM Promotion process

Engagement of key stakeholders

• 28 stakeholders were interviewed
  • Promotion committee members
  • Leaders within SOM, Academic Affairs, Office for Advancement, Community Engagement, CU office of Gov’t Relations, Office of Communications, CU state lobbyist and CU Denver.
What did our stakeholders say?
Common themes among key stakeholders

“No one has trouble getting promoted based on service.”

“Service is something we all should be doing just by being here.”

“This is a systemic issue. The culture needs to be challenged.”

“Focus on amplifying service rather than watering down promotion.”

“People have tried this before, it hasn’t worked.”
What are other universities doing to promote service?

Structured review of promotion criteria using a sample of medical schools comparable to CUSOM
Approach Used by Other Medical Schools

- Reviewed promotion criteria for 19 outside institutions
  - Top-10 medical schools (funding or academic rank)
  - Institutions matching rank with CU in research
- Most consider service important
  - “Service” was rarely operationalized but most often includes serving on committees or having administrative roles
- Most do not recognize Excellence in Service
  - Only two institutions (Emory and University of Alabama) explicitly allow faculty to pursue Excellence in Service
  - No long-term data on impact of service on their faculty satisfaction and retention
What exists on campus to support community service?

What should we do differently?

Propose goals and map critical next steps to improve recognition of excellence in community service at CUSOM.
Opportunities

CU will become be the leader in Community Service, supporting the health of diverse populations through broad engagement of students, faculty, donors, and community partners:

• More equitable promotion process
• Increase retention of diverse faculty
• Enhance career satisfaction and well-being
• Promote trust of CUSOM by the community
• More referrals from our clinical partners
1-Year Strategies

1. Disseminate information about existing CU Resources for Community Service

2. Use the Faculty Climate Survey to measure perceptions of recognition, and support, of Community Service

3. Retrospectively review promotion dossiers for professors across Departments/Schools for evidence of Community Service within any matrix

4. Offer “mid-point” reviews for Associate Professor to Full Professor transition, including emphasis on how to recognize Community Service
2-4 Year Strategies

1. Incorporate existing service excellence benchmarks into the Clinical, Research and Teaching matrices
2. Adapt an Office of Community Service for the Anschutz Medical Campus (based on other programs)
3. Expand grant funding to promote Community Service
4. Expand faculty development via training and mentorship
5. Develop a long-term institutional strategy for investing in Community Service
5-Year Strategies

1. Recognize the Excellence in Service matrix for promotion to Full Professor
2. Expand CUSOM example to inform expansion to CU Anschutz
3. Study outcomes of faculty-led Community Service and impacts of faculty recruitment, retention, promotion and career satisfaction
CUSOM and their faculty will be the national leader in the Community Service
