Guide Overview

Introduction

This guide was created to provide Domestic Violence Direct Service Providers throughout the State of Colorado a comprehensive overview of the technical assistance resources available to them to help strengthen operations, programs and services. Some resources are available through providers in Colorado, other resources are available through national organizations. Topics you will find here include where to go for assistance with management and operations needs (like strategic planning, financial management, fund development, board development, succession planning, human resources, program evaluation, volunteer management, among others), and programming and service provision specific to DV providers (like managing crisis hotlines, safehouses and shelters, working with community partners and local law enforcement.)

What is Technical Assistance?

Technical Assistance is support you need to meet your mission and conduct your work more effectively. Delivery methods of TA could include: attending a workshop or training session, participating in a webinar, receiving executive coaching in person or over the phone, accessing written materials like tool kits, receiving professional facilitation services for a retreat, or working with a consultant on a customized TA engagement. Technical Assistance should inspire new skills or information that will help your organization change and improve.

How this Guide is Organized

This guide is organized to help Domestic Violence Providers easily navigate the list of resources. The guide is first divided by Colorado-based and National-based organizations in order to highlight resources available within and specifically to Colorado-based providers. Other geographic areas, such as rural or Denver-metro, are also denoted. Beyond the regions served, the guide is divided into organizations that provide specific programming and service resources to Domestic Service Providers. The guide ends with funding sources for technical assistance.

Guide Sections
I.   Colorado-based Nonprofit Assistance Resources- for management, operations, board development and governance
II.   Colorado-based Domestic Violence Programming and Service Provision Resources
III.   National-based Nonprofit Assistance Resources- for management, operations, board development and governance
IV.   National-based Domestic Violence Programming and Service Provision Resources

V.   Funding Sources

How to Make the Most of this Guide

This guide aims to include as much relevant information possible so that Domestic Service Providers can easily and quickly assess what each resource provides and, thus, which resource is most suited to their needs. Areas of expertise, special populations served (if any), modes of technical assistance, and geographic area served are among the details highlighted for each organization. To streamline your search, use the "find" application (CTRL+F) to search for keywords such as "Rural," "LGBT," "Latina," "Teen," "Elder," "Board Development," etc.

When to Use Technical Assistance

In order for victims of domestic violence to find safety and support, they often seek and should receive help from well-run and efficient direct service organizations. Access to information and support for domestic violence organizations on program and management best practices is, therefore, critical. This may be especially true in communities with underserved populations where organizations may lack access to high quality, nonprofit management training.

Many organizations think of technical assistance when in crisis mode. Seeking TA at a time when the organization is not in crisis could assist with planning, skill development and leadership in ways that can avoid crises all together. When you find yourself stumped about what to do next, need assistance evaluating impact, want to hone a specific skill set, determine ways to improve your board of directors or find yourself too restricted in time to lead planning or programming improvements, seeking technical assistance could be your very best next step.

About the Vital Project

This guide was prepared by the Vital Project: Management Training and Technical Assistance to support Domestic Violence Direct Service Providers throughout the state of Colorado in the Technical Assistance needs. The Vital Project is a program delivered by the Center on Domestic Violence and Mission Spark, and is funded by DVP. The Vital Project provides technical assistance to service providers and the services of the Vital Project are provided to Colorado DVP-funded programs at no charge. Here are some of the ways services are provided.

- Custom technical assistance on specific organizational problems your agency may be facing, accessed through a short application process
- Management webinars on priority topics (e.g. program evaluation, human resources, finance)
- An online peer-learning community and resource hub that focuses on sharing DV-specific capacity building resources for agencies, as well as curating peer insight.
- On-line toolkits and training aimed at building the management capacity of your organization

A special thank you to Mission Spark Associate Consultant Kelley Ritz for her diligent work in gathering and detailing the resources found here.
