Biography

Anne Nederveld, MD, MPH, is an Internal Medicine/Pediatrics trained physician who has lived and worked in Grand Junction for the past thirteen years. She practiced primary care medicine at a safety net clinic and in private practice for ten years and completed a primary care research fellowship through the University of Colorado in 2017. She is currently an assistant professor in the Department of Family Medicine at CU, but lives and works in Grand Junction. She is developing a Western Slope Practice-based Research Network (PEACHnet) as well as exploring other opportunities for community engaged and primary care research in Western Colorado. Her primary research interests are in obesity treatment and prevention as well as exploring the effects of social determinants of health on practice strategies and health outcomes.
